

Day 1 & 2

So Yesterday was Sunday, the Day we left Copenhagen airport to go to Italy. It was only about 2,5 hours on the plane, but I choose to sleep the entire way. When we arrived in Rome we had to wait 3 hours for the bus to come. It was quiet a while to sit and wait outside at airport, but that the terms. The bus chauffeur drove like a madman, but somehow, I managed to sleep the 4 hours It took. When we arrived at our hostel we unpacked as fast as we could, so we could go out and get some food finally. It was a little fancy restaurant we went to, I ordered of cause a pizza because it was the first day. After that we found sports bar and watched some soccer and got a beer or two, then we called it a night.

The next day was the first school day. The breakfast was awful but at least there was coffee. Dennis wasn't sure when to get off the bus, so we were so lucky to ride to the end station and back again. The teachers we had today were really great and devoted for us to learn something.

The plan tonight is to get some delicious food and just relax. But let's see what the night brings

Day 3 & 4

So, day 3 were an extremely lazy day, we all spend the entire day in the bed and went down to get some pizza for dinner. It was nice to relax a bit after two days with action.

But on the other side day 4 Wednesday, had a lot to offer. We started the day in school where there was fresh pasta on the menu. We made some pasta and some different delicious dishes. After school the fun began, or what we thought was going to be fun. The next stop was Gubbio, there was some kind of festival where they ran around with some big wooden logs and they ran really long. The streets were absolutely filled with people which made it very difficult to walk around. But the atmosphere was amazing. The weather was bad and really cold, we got promised free wine and food but got either. Which made the trip not really worth the money.

Day 5 & 6

So, day 5 wasn't that exciting, we made some pasta again and not very much else. The entire boy's room was a bit tired so we all took a long nap after school. When we woke up after the nap, we went out for some food and on the way, we found this beautiful view on the picture above, and got a little glass of wine to the view.

We went on and found this little cosy local restaurant, where we had another glass of wine and a burger.

Today we made some more pasta dishes and got off early so we can enjoy the weekend. The plan tonight is to hit the town hard with lots of liqueur and just have an absolutely great time.

The weekend

So, the weekend came, and we went out for some food and wine. One thing went to another and the first day of the weekend was over fast.

Sunday was really chill and cosy. When we woke up we went straight down to Ferrari which makes pizza in Umbria style. We took the pizza and jumped back in bed, where we laid all day.

Day 9 & 10

So, its Monday now, and that's means I the beginning of the pizza week. This is the week I've been looked most forward to. The first day here were about the different kinds of doughs and how to use them in which pizza. When we came home we took out for a little walk to a supermarket, so we can buy some good ingredients for the food were going to make tonight.

Day 10 wasn't the busiest day here in Italy, we just worked with the dough and really felt it. After that we made a pizza to ourselves and ate that. The food is perfect after a good day at class, it's like you're rewarding yourself.

Day 11 & 12

Today we made some really delicious pizza, we learnt that the best pizza doesn't have more than 3 toppings on it. The reason for that is to get the best possible taste out of each ingredient. I made one with cheese, sausage and potato, so no tomato sauce. It was extremely good and tasteful and not dry at all.

Day 12 was just about the same as yesterday, we made some great pizza and ate it. At the evening we went out a big group and had some food and a lot of wine. The pizza today was how they make pizza in Napoli down south, a bit more misshaped.

Last day

So, it's finally the last day, school was done quickly, and we got some diplomas for attending these last two weeks and said our goodbyes to the teacher and principal. We drank a beer on the way home and went out for food the evening. Nearly everybody went to bed early cause of the early bus Saturday.

We woke up went down for the bus, got on the plane and voila we are home. It's been a good trip and we have learned a whole lot. This is guaranteed a trip I would say yes to in the future.
